ANOTHER SPEECH BY EDW. EVERETT. Consecration of Minot's Ledge Light House We have come, sir, to express our interest in a great public work. Well do I rememher that dreadful night, the 16 h of Arril, 1851, when a farious storm swept al ng the coast of New England, by which bouses were unroofed, steeples toppled down and vessels driven on shore. In the a une of that tremendons night, he light-house on Minot's Ledge disappeared; it was last seen at 31 o'clock in the afternoon, and between that hour and daylight the following morning, the ocean, driven in by the furious tempest, had bested the light- ouse f om the rice iron pillars on which it re-ted and which it twisted like osiers, had dashed it in fragments on the rock-, and with it the two brave men who, in that awful hour, stood bravely at their posts. We have come now, sir, to repair the desolations of that hour, and to lay the corner-stone of a structure destined by that divine blessing which has been so ferrently invoked by the reverend Chaplain, to resist the utmost violence of the winds and the waves.

It is a point second to no other on our coast, both for the amount of the commerce which passes it, North and South, to its destined markets, and for the perits which here await the mariner. If Minot's Ledge could keep a Minot's ledger, in which the value of every cargo that passes it, in either direction, could be entered, and in which-on another page-could be recorded the fearful apprehensions and heart-broken lamentations of anxious and bereaved mothers, wives, sisters and daughters, sorrowing for the delay of the loved ones, destined many of them never to return, it would furnish an illustration of the importance of a lighthouse on these mournfully notorious rocks, which would need no comment of mine.

It is a work of interest for other reasons, to which you, sir, (Capt. Alexander) have so pertinently alluded. We are assembled here to-day, not as citizens of Massachusetts, but as citizens of the United States. The lighthouse is for the more immediate benefit of the commerce of Massachusets, but the expease is borne by the general government.— The appropriations for its construction have been passed by the concurrent votes of representatives from the remotest parts of the Union. As the lighthouses off Cape Hatteras, on the Florida reef, and at the mouths of the Mississippi have been erected by the votes of your representatives, and proportionably by the resources which you have furnished to the common treasury, so the noble and ex-laid, will be built with the concurrence and aid of your fellow-citizens who inhabit portions of the Union which the sun does not reach the same hour that he shines on you In fact, it was primarily for the commerce of the country, and all the works and measures requisite for its growth and protection, that the Constitution of the United States was framed, and the present government estabheled.

But you are not alone promoting the interests of our own vast country, in creeting this noble structure. As has been well stated by the gentleman who has preceded me, it is for the common benefit of the nations. The light which y u kindle, you kindle not to guide your own vessels alone—the vessels of the friendly provinces on the North from which we are vary happy to see a mest respectable gentleman presect on this occasion, (Hon. Joseph Howe, republic on the South whose late President (General Compositor) also honors us with his presence, will equally share the benefit. Nay, MANUFACTURED BY POTTS & KLETT, and To be drawn under the Superintendence of Commission Line 1997. eir, i will extend to the remotest regions of the civilized world, from which a ship shall go forth to navigate our waters.

But I most not detain you, Mr Mayer and gentlemen, at this late bour. Let me close by responding to the patriotic sentiment of Captain Alexander. As the costly and important structure whose erection he has so auspiciously commenced, has been founded and earried on under the auspices of the government of the Ucion, let it prove a symbol of that Uniou's duration and solidity. Owing so much of our prosperity to it, let us warmly cherish and support it. Let us remember bat in the eve: t of its rupture,-which Heaven and its mercy avert,-the protecting power which now spreads its ægis over us, East and West, and North and South, will be forever gone;and as you have told us, sir, that the solid foundation of the structure you are rearing is lit ked and bolted together with dove tailed blocks of granite and bar- of galvanized iron so as never to be moved, so may the Sister States of the Umon be forever bound together by the stronger ties, of common larguage, kindred blood, and mutual affection!
